Helix Water District's xeriscape garden wins award at conference

The award for the "Best Xeriscape Garden--Commercial Division" was presented to the Helix Water District on Friday, October 26, at the Xeriscape '90 conference held at the San Diego Convention Center.

The xeriscape, or low-water use garden, was chosen from many other commercial entries. It consists of drought-tolerant trees and plants and is located at the District's R.M. Levy Treatment Plant at 9550 Lake Jennings Park Road in Lakeside. Water Quality Superintendent Don Gauthier and employees Casey Cable and Herman Lowenberg, developers of the winning garden, attended the luncheon to receive the award.

Helix's xeriscape garden was begun four years ago when a large water-thirsty lawn was removed from the treatment plant to make way for a low-water use garden more suitable for the semi-arid climate of San Diego. A professional landscaper put in the sidewalks, and some of the large trees and plants. Two years ago Gauthier, Cable, and Lowenberg took over the garden project and proceeded to add many more colorful and interesting plants. When asked where their ideas originated, Lowenberg stated; "We just tried to duplicate what we saw in nature," Some other creative features include large boulders, a dry streambed, a sand wash, and elevation changes.

"A xeriscape garden doesn't have to be boring," Lowenberg commented.

Lemon Grove McDonald's expands and updates

Big Mac lovers may have noticed that the Lemon Grove McDonald's on Broadway is going through some growing pains. The right side of the building has been expanded as part of a general update of the building which includes new fixtures and rewiring.

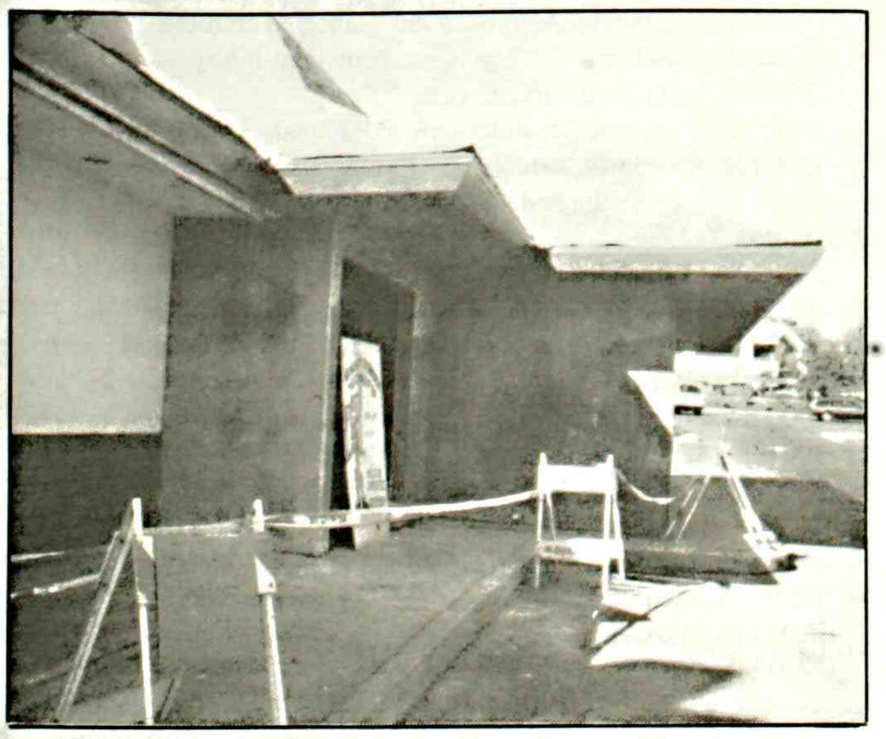
Owner Mark O'Rourke said the building is almost 15-years-old and it was time to make some improvements such as building larger restrooms to accommodate the handicapped.The addition of another window to the drive-thru portion of the building will help ease congestion during peak hours because customers will be able to pay at one window and pick up their food at another.

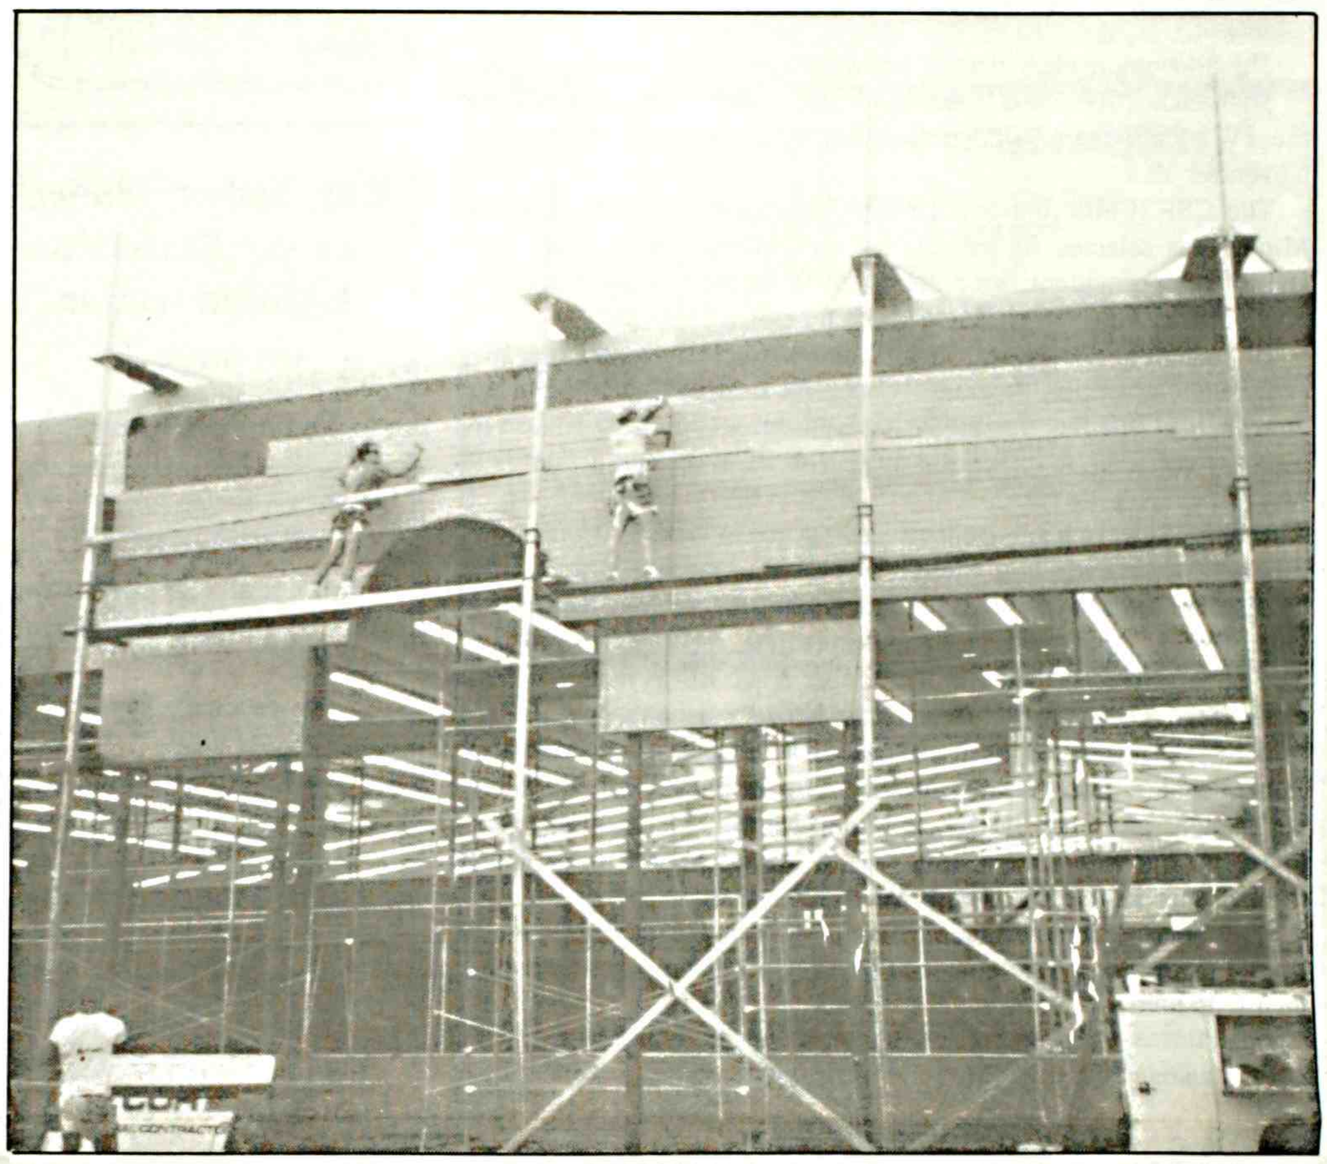
O'Rourke said the largest portion of the restaurant's business is drive-thru and that's where he is concentrating the restaurant's expansion.

Construction is expected to be completed by early December, hopefully the 15th.

Other changes at McDonald's include a move to reduce the the amount of material the restaurant contributes to land fills by switching from styrofoam food containers to paper wrappings which are less bulky.

O'Rourke said the transition has been moving along smoothly, with the restaurant's breakfast products already switched to paper. Most of the other food products will be out of styrofoam in two months.The company is also looking for alternative products for their hot beverages such as coffee.





Construction was still underway this week as Smart & Final rushes to put the finishing touches on the building before the store opens November 19th.

Smart & Final announces the opening of its Lemon Grove store, 110th for chain

Smart & Final will open its 110th store in Lemon Grove on Monday, November 19 in the former Good Luck market building.

The building is 14,500 square feet, making it slightly larger than Smart & Final's El Cajon store, and has been extensively renovated. The new store will employ four full-time people, eight part-time people and two courtesy clerks. Larry Yost, who was the assistant manager of the company's El Cajon store, will be the manager in Lemon Grove and Dan Telli is the assistant manager.

The 119-year-old Smart & Final chain is the largest "cash and carry" warehouse grocer in the United States with stores in California, Nevada and Arizona.

The company markets over 2,500 products under several private brand names including the Iris brand label for top quality and Table Queen and Smart buy labels for standard quality purchases of food and non-food items. The Iris brand was first introduced by Smart & Final's predecessor company in 1895.

The company traces its roots to the 1871 establishment of Hellman, Haas & Co. which later changed its name to Haas, Baruch and Company.

Independently, J.S. Smart & H.D. Final joined forces in 1915 to create Smart & Final Wholesale Grocers and introduced the concept of cash and carry to California by opening their first outlet in the Long Beach area in 1924.

In 1953, these two Southern California companies merged and became Smart and Final Iris Corporation (SFI). The merger combined the strength of Smart & Final's cash and carry outlets with Haas, Baruch and Company's distribution center and well known private Iris label brand.

SFI was purchased by Thriftimart, a leading Southern California publicly-held retail grocery chain, in 1955.

In 1984 Thriftimart was purchased by Casino USA, a subsidiary of the $8 billion French retailer, Etablissements Economiques du Casino Guichard-Perrachon et Cie, or Casino de France. This international food processing and retailing corporation is France's second largest food retailer.

The largest chain of its kind in the United States, Smart & Final operates nearly three times as many stores and stocks more than twice as many products as any of its competitors in the industry.

In addition, the company has successfully incorporated proven retail merchandising, packaging and display techniques in selling to a traditional food service, institutional customer base.

Membership is not required to shop at Smart & Final stores. Low warehouse prices are possible by focusing on quantity, through efficiency and careful cost control and by offering its own private label brands.

Smart & Final attracts a different type of customer base than a supermarket or a traditional cash and carry. While all customers are welcome and invited to shop at Smart & Final stores, the company's marketing and merchandising efforts are targeted toward the institutional customer and the small business operator.

The company focuses itself as being a specialist in the supply of small businesses such as independent restaurants, caterers, schools, clubs, organizations, and small grocery stores.

Over the next three years, 35 new Smart & Final stores will open. The stores are growing not only in number, but in size to accommodate the higher volume of customers.

Lemon Grove optometrist still makes house calls to those in need

For the past seven years, Dr. James W. Cummins, an East County optometrist, has been working with patients in their own settings, providing vision care. He is currently providing care to over thirty board and care facilities and has seen over 3,700 patients since 1983.

"Most of us don't give a second thought to sitting down with the evening paper and looking up occasionally at the TV. We can head outdoors for a walk around the block, even stop to visit with the neighbors. Sounds easy. It is for many," noted Dr. Cummins, "there are many, though who are confined to their home or a long-term care facility."

Director of Patient Relations, Barbara Schroer, said, "As our ability to get around decreases so does our feeling of independence. Adding a decrease in vision compounds the problems. By Dr. Cummins providing vision care to these patients, he helps them maintain their independence and their ability to engage in everyday tasks," Schroer noted, "The key is providing efficient use of these patients residual vision."

Some of the most common near distance goals range from reading the newspaper and books to maintaining proper vision for desk or table top skills.

Distance goals range form watching TV to being able to recognize family and friends. An individual treatment plan is established based on the patient's visual goals and the route to success begins when the doctor and patient develop a trusting working relationship.

Dr. Cummins' Mobile Vision Van is equipped with the necessary optometric equipment enabling him to test for glaucoma, cataracts and other eye diseases as well as visual acuity.

Mr. Paul Sibel, the Administrator of Point Loma Convalescent Hospital, "appreciates Dr. Cummins ability to tune into the issues and needs of his geriatric patients especially when they sometimes are unable to give him feedback."

Sibel noted that, "Dr. Cummins is thorough and understanding in his ability to communicate to the responsible party why their mother or father needs certain types of visual care and what can be done with their remaining vision.

Dr. Cummins's primary practice is in Lemon Grove, in the Professional Building off Broadway, where he practices full-scope optometry. His Lemon Grove Vision Care Center specializes in corrective therapy for sports vision and the learning impaired; children's vision; specialty contact lenses; low vision care for the partially-sighted; as well as general optometry.

O'Rourkes laud the strengthening of shooting restrictions in Mt. Laguna

Dear Editor,

The San Diego County Board of Supervisors has recently adopted an amendment to ordinance No. 7826, establishing minimum shooting distances near roads, habitats and in the vicinity of recreation areas. They have accomplished a significant feat on behalf of the few residents of the Laguna Mountain Recreation Area, and the thousands who visit here annually. Their bold and forthright action is to be applauded.

The supervisors are now experiencing repercussions from hunters and target shooters and that is inevitable. However, they are vastly in the minority of those who use the mountain roads, trails, campgrounds and picnic areas. My neighbors and I fully support the County's position; to again amend the new ordinance in favor of hunting will nullify the Board's purposes in adopting the ordinance, again placing the health and lives of the residents and visitors of the Lagunas in jeopardy, and the forest in excessive and unnecessary hazard of fire.

If any amendment is to be made to the ordinance as it now stands, it must include both crossbows and long bows to the unlawful discharge of weapons. As one neighbor commented, "hunting and recreating simply don't mix."

Until the adoption of this very vital ordinance amendment, we had honestly believed that someone--perhaps a child--would have to be killed, or our beloved forest destroyed, before any preventative action would be taken. The Board of Supervisors have taken a pro-active rather than re-active stance; ensuring the safety of their constituents, and this rare and precious woodlands environment, before it became too late.

I urge anyone who enjoys recreation opportunities in the Lagunas to write to each of the supervisors, and express support of this amendment.

Sincerely,
Mark O'Rourke

What happened

Since election day, pundits from every conceivable direction have been attempting some meaningful interpretation of "what happened." For the most part, their analyses have been widely divergent. Given what we thought was the national mood, the results just don't quite fit.

Quixotically, the voters, angry at Congress and their local legislatures, returned most of them to office and seemed to take their anti-incumbent fury out on local government. With the exception of Jim Bates, who was involved in a controversy of his own, all of the local congressional delegation was returned to Washington, while incumbent heads fell among those involved in city government throughout the County.

Some of the experts suggest that the usual 90-plus percent were returned to Washington because, as angry as voters were with their representatives, those who ran against them were even worse. This is cute and funny, but probably untrue.

Others suggest that people were angry at Congress in general, but not at their own representatives specifically.

This sounds a little closer to the mark, and if there is indeed some truth in it, it would suggest that deep divisions within the populace are being reflected in broad general discontent that is unable to focus on a specific target, or find any positive consensus. History has taught us that unfocused discontent leads to a search for targets and a tendency to scapegoat individuals or segments of the population.

At the moment, perhaps, we're fortunate to have Saddam Hussein to "kick around."

The divided leadership in Washington, reflective as it would seem of the national mood, would be ill-equipped to deal with the overwhelming problems facing the nation.

Debt and deficit vie with recession, homelessness, the threat of bloody warfare and the larger overall feeling of the failure of government, in the minds of our citizens.

There is profound division between those still caught in the "Reagan dream" of "trickle-down" economy, and those seeing a need for massive government aid to the needy through higher or re-directed taxes.

If the election achieved anything, it was to underscore and widen the division in our national government. We appear unwilling to march in new directions. And thus, we retain a mood that is both angry and negative.

Here in California, we are angry at government by proposition, so we vote "no" on almost all 28 ballot measures except Proposition 140 which limits legislative terms. It would seem that we are angry at them but, unable to trust ourselves to vote them out, we make a law that impersonally throws them out.

In summary, we would appear to have a divided and sometimes fearful electorate led by a divided and frequently fearful government. The only broad consensus would seem to be distrust and anger which can lead in non-productive directions. The need for honest, fearless leadership is strong, but too much fear and distrust opens the door to the demagogue. There would seem to be very hard times ahead for which there is no easy answer.

Bring in the Clowns

Next to my picture in the "Class of 1940" high school yearbook was inscribed "The Class Clown." I guess I inherited my sense of humor from my parents. Due to my crazy antics, the class was always rolling in the aisles, which really irked the teacher.

I was able to tell an appropriate joke to fit the occasion as I had a kind of Henny Youngman "rapid fire" delivery. Sometimes, I couldn't remember my phone number or address, but I had jokes unlimited. My material lost some of its meaning when it had to be cleaned-up for a more dignified audience.

My first taste of performing before a live audience didn't come until after I joined the Masons.

A few of us nuts organized a clown unit to be known as the "Selim Grotto Clowns." Our dedicated aim was to entertain the less fortunates.

To learn make-up and clown tricks, we hung-out at the big Shrine Circus, a unit of Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey conglomerate. My wife made all my silly costumes, so together with a big red nose and a pair of gigantic, brightly colored floppy shoes, I was right in my glory performing for the "maddening crowd."

Our group put on shows regularly at all the state institutions. I was real hesitant at first, not knowing what to expect from those most unusual people. The ice was broken for me at one of the first shows as I came running in to the theater giving out candy and kidding with those mentally and physically deformed kids. I truthfully was kind of scared of them until one misshapen little tyke grabbed me tightly around the neck and said, "Are you my Daddy?" That did it. I was now "in like Flynn."

Besides mingling in the audience, I was the leader of our fake "Clown Band" that played dummy instruments to a recording. I did several solos, lip-synching to zanny Spike Jones records: "I Cried at Your Wedding," (while dressed in an ill-fitting old tuxedo), "I Saw Mama Kissing Santa Claus," (dressed-up like a little girl), and "All I Want For Christmas Is My Two Front Teeth," (dressed in only a diaper, bonnet, booties and not much more).

All of us clowns put lots of work, effort and money into the project and sometimes even used our vacation time to perform. I'm sure we all got more out of being clowns than we put in. Our reward for all the effort was the laughter and excitement that resounded from our most appreciative audiences.

Heartland Fire Agencies offer holiday cooking safety tips to local residents

The holiday season is rapidly approaching. Many families spend considerable time in the kitchen preparing for the upcoming festivities.

The Heartland Fire Agencies would like to share some kitchen safety tips to assure your holidays are enjoyable and safe this year.

It is most important to remember when you are using your stove and oven to be alert and attentive at all times. Practice these safety rules:

- Never leave cooking unattended.
- Wear close-fitting sleeves when cooking.
- Turn pot handles in so they cannot be knocked off or pulled down by small children.
- If a fire starts in a pan, on top of the stove, cover the pan with a lid to smother the flames and turn off the burner. Leave the lid on until it is cool.
- Never pour water on a grease fire.
- Have a fire extinguisher accessible in the kitchen. Another extinguishing agent is baking soda.
- If a fire should occur in the oven or broiler, keep the door closed, turn off the heat and call for assistance.
- In all cases if the fire is large or cannot be safely controlled, dial 911 for fire department assistance and clear all occupants out of the home.

Microwave ovens are more convenient and generally considered safer than conventional cooking appliances. However, certain food products if improperly heated can become sources of serious burn injuries. The most common cause of burns associated with microwave use is scalds from either hot liquids or steam. The greatest number of scald burns occur in the home, in the kitchen.

Follow the safety tips listed above and have a safe holiday.

Heartland Fire Agencies include the Alpine, Bostonia, Crest, El Cajon, Lakeside, La Mesa, Lemon Grove, San Miguel and Santee fire districts.

Great advice served at awards dinner

Big names, great deeds and wee folks gathered last week at the Stardust Country Club to honor dedication, perseverance and achievement. And some of the awardees were under ten years of age.

They start pretty young in Junior Golf and those who manage junior golfing affairs keep young right along with them.

President emeritus John W. Brown, who started the San Diego Junior Golf program back in 1952 is 91 years of age.

Mrs. A.S. "Lou" Smith, who shared all those years of growth and development as executive secretary, dosen't like to mention her age... besides being past 80-something.

Norrie West, who now carries the load, admits to be at even par. But who trusts the handicapper?

Brownie, Lou and Norrie were all warmly received by parents, guests, players and a host of friends at last week's 33rd Annual Junior Golf Awards Banquet.

Craig Stadler was there. A veteran PGA tour star (and a former Masters' winner), Craig is a serious fund-raiser for Junior Golf. He has hosted a ProAm following the San Diego Open over the last five years, and has raised nearly $120,000 for the program.

He made a few presentations and said a few words. He's a Junior Golf contributor now, but he was really there as the father of one of the players. Kevin Stadler finished third in the year-long point standings for the 10 and under division.

In all, 50 youngsters were honored, which may seem like a lot of winners, but there are 900 young golfers in the program and Junior Golf officials judge each one to be a winner.

The youngsters come from all over San Diego County, from Oceanside to Spring Valley. La Mesa's Kristyl Sunderman won "girl golfer of the year" honors the last two years. She has also earned a full four-year scholarship to UCLA where she'll play golf and study communications (golfers tend to be good students).

Chris Riley, of Madison High, won the "boy golfer of the year" award. And he's got another year to go, but he'll never top his 'pop.' Mike Riley won the award five times.

Phil Mickelson, a three-time winner, is the current U.S. Amateur Champion and a two-time NCAA Champion after just two years of study on a full four-year scholarship at the University of Arizona. He spent 12 years in the Junior Golf program.

He kiddingly referred to Craig as "Mr. Stadler," during his remarks to the audience. The "Ol Walrus" didn't let him get away with that bit of frivolous formality.

Stadler, (who with Gene Littler is the only other San Diegan to win the U.S. Amateur title beside Phil) offered his colleague some sound advice, dressed up with a barb of his own.

"I get this "Mr. Stadler" over here, from the one who I hope stays in school for another four years because I don't care for you to be playing out there when I am, thank-you," he grinned.

Then in a more serious vein, "For all of you, stay in school as long as you can. It's a great temptation to come out on tour...there's a lot of money to be made out there...but in your career as a professional golfer, you need the schooling, you need the maturing, to manage your game and your business, whatever it's going to be. You have a great life ahead of you..."

That's straight advice from one who actually plays the game.

Work permit hassle

by Tasha Stelse, Helix High School

In this day and age, it is difficult for adults to find preferred jobs. For a minor, finding a halfway decent job is even worse. Yet, the most troublesome part of job hunting is having to acquire a work permit. Both federal and state laws require legally employed people between the ages of 12 and 18 to possess a work permit.

Career centers are located on school campuses throughout the Grossmont District to aid students with their employment needs. It is very discouraging for a student who is need of a permit to find assistance in these centers. It is understood that many tasks are performed within the centers, however, more often than not, the directors seem to be away from their desk. Whether the supervisors of the office are absent for two weeks or two minutes, someone should be left in charge who is authorized to assist with or sign the necessary forms.

Every year, between 300 and 500 students per campus visit a career center to obtain a permit. Yet, many students' job opportunities perish, or several weeks of employment are lost due to the centers' lack of professionalism. It should be brought to the students' attention that the office is inaccessible to those seeking work permits during summer vacation. This policy should be altered in order to better serve the needs of students throughout the entire year.

It is tedious enough finding a job, without having to go to extremes to obtain a work permit. This feeling of frustration is shared by many others who have experienced the pitfalls mentioned above. If this practice remains as is, the career centers will lose the support of the student body and become centers of resentment.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This Week's movies: Disney and Childs' Play II

"The Prince and the Pauper" followed by "The Rescuers Down Under"

A Walt Disney cartoon can turn even a cynic's heart to mush. I know, because as I watched this animated double feature, I felt pretty mushy.

"The Prince and the Pauper" is a featurette, starring Mickey Mouse in his first leading role in almost ten years. A reworking of the traditional tale about royalty and peasantry trading places, it also features famed Disney characters Pluto, Goofy, Peg-leg Pete and my personal favorite, Donald Duck. The action is charming and the music, energetic. I wouldn't be surprised if the folks at Disneyland built a "Prince and the Pauper" attraction. The film is great fun.

All of that is only a sample, however, a peek at the truly amazing animation to come. After a cleverly handled, on-screen, ten-minute intermission, the audience is whisked away to brilliant Australia and a rousing adventure with "The Rescuers Down Under."

A hideous outback villain, (the voice of George C. Scott), has kidnapped a young boy, hoping to make him a poaching assistant. Who can help this innocent lad? Who shall we call? The rangers? The military? Don't be silly. Call Miss Bianca and Mr. Bernard, two heroic mice from the Rescue Aid Society.

With voices provided by Eva Gabor and Bob Newhart, the rescuing rodents enlist the help of a veritable zoo: a hapless albatross named Wilbur (John Candy), a tough Australian kangaroo mouse, and Frank, a likeable reptile with a bad case of nerves. I won't tell you how things turn out, but we all know Disney has a soft spot for happy endings.

The quality of animation in "The Rescuers" is unlike anything I've ever seen before! With painstaking care, animators created lush, breathtaking scenery, and every moment of the film is awe-inspiring. It's almost an indescribable effect...you really should see it for yourself.

The only thing that separates "The Rescuers" from Disney's older animated classics is a lack of musical numbers. As the credits rolled, I realized in horror--"Hey! Nobody sang!" I felt robbed. But it was a great film anyway.

"Childs' Play II"

When a movie about a demonic killer doll makes 40 million dollars, it upsets me. But when they make a sequel to a movie about a demonic killer doll, it makes me furious.

You see, Chucky's back! And boy, is he bad! And I don't mean "bad" as in cool, or awesome, I mean "bad" as in poor, stupid, insulting, laughable, predictable and dumb.

In the first "Childs' Play" movie, young Andy Barclay was pursued by the soul of a dead psychopathic killer disguised as a toy. This rubber fiend was called "Chucky," and he wanted to become Andy's soul. In the end, however, Andy and his mother managed to defeat Chucky, and everybody lived happily ever after... until Part II.

Now, Andy has been placed in foster care, while his mother undergoes psychiatric treatment, and Chucky--who had been burnt and decapitated--is reconstructed by toy-store executives. Like many horror villains before him, Chucky just won't give up. But I wish he would.

Every scene in this movie is contrived. It's as if writer Don Mancini intentionally used every horror film cliche. Heroes walk around in dark rooms, adults refuse to believe children, and monsters jump up at you just when you think they're dead.

The doll himself, which is actually a complex puppet utilizing the talent of nine puppeteers, is sometimes fascinating to watch, but that's not enough to make me forget the rest of what is a horrible movie.

Musical innovator to play ECPAC

Dr. Ron Pellegrino is coming to the East County Performing Arts Center, and he's bringing his imagination.

Pellegrino pioneered the technology that became the Moog synthesizer (which eventually gave every English dance-pop band from Depeche Mode to Erasure, a reason to exist), and is a leader in emerging technology and the arts.

Dr. Pellegrino's talent is a flair for sound-as-sight and sight-as-sound, making the two senses feel like one, through the use of computers, film, oscilloscopes, spectrum analyzers and video synthesizers.

Pre-performance discussion begins at 8 p.m., curtain time is 8:30 p.m. on November 19th and 20th at the Performing Arts Center at 210 East Main Street, El Cajon.

County Water Authority says the Stage II Water Alert will continue until further notice

By Paul Treske

The County Water Authority (CWA) has continued the Stage II water alert until further notice.

Pointing to the fact that California has had zero run-off of rain water in its major watershed for the past eight months, Helix Water District General Manager Bob Friedgen urges continuation of the current efforts as California faces a possible fifth consecutive drought year.

"Statewide, our storage areas are dropping 20,000 acre feet per day," says Friedgen (325,851 gallons--an acre foot).

He brings the point home locally by noting that Lake Cuyamaca, which holds 1,000 acre feet at capacity, now holds only 384 acre feet of water.

Friedgen praises the people of the Helix District for their efforts thus far in water conservation but points to the fact that the goal of 10 percent saving is in no danger of being met.

As of November 6 the Districts' cumulative savings over the same period in 1989 were down to 8.4 percent from a high of 12.4 percent in June.

What Southern California basically needs, according to Friedgen is a strong series of rains, creating run-off from the Sierras and the Colorado River watersheds, which combined, provide virtually all of the water for the area. Heavy local rains, while they would serve to reduce general usage, would not positively affect local water sources.

Friedgen points to the recent series of Santa Anas as having totally dried out the area, and adds that statewide, 30 million people are now borrowing water from storage."

The drought is so bad in California, that one-third of the state's large fir trees have been lost to beetle infestation brought on by lack of water.

Although Stage II will continue, Friedgen states that there are no plans at this time to advance to Stages III or IV.

Spizak named chairman of McDonald Center for Alcoholism and Drug Addiction

Lt. David Spisak of Lemon Grove, who is the drug and alcohol prevention coordinator of the San Diego Police Department and special assistant to the city manager of San Diego, has been appointed chairman of the National Advisory Board of Scripps Memorial Hospital's McDonald Center for Alcoholism and Drug Addiction and Drug Addiction Treatment.

"In his new post as chairman, Lt. Spisak's valuable experience at the law enforcement and city government levels will enhance the board's ongoing efforts in meeting the challenges of alcohol and drug addiction rehabilitation," says John Seaman, intervention service counselor for the McDonald Center.

The McDonald Center's 44-member National Advisory Board serves in a voluntary advisory capacity to the management and staff of the McDonald Center, as well as participating in fund raising efforts, scholarship review and community outreach.

The McDonald Center is a 88-bed inpatient and outpatient chemical dependency treatment facility for adults and adolescents. Located at Scripps Memorial Hospitals in La Jolla, the Center is nationally known for chemical dependency treatment excellence and its successful use of the intervention method--a process by which the alcoholic/addict is lovingly confronted by family members, co-workers and urged into treatment. More than 5,500 patients and 8,000 family members have been treated at the Center since the facility was established in 1979.

Election results bring new look to Grossmont - Cuyamaca Community College Governing Board

There is a decidedly new look to the the Grossmont- Cuyamaca Community College College District Governing Board. A 19-year old, a local businessman, and a clinical psychologist serving her first elected term made the election November 6 an interesting contest indeed. Close behind leading vote getter Rebecca Clark, were businessman Rick Alexander and Dr. Rochelle Bastien.

Longtime Board members Dr. Sydney Wiener and Thomas Buchenau were not re-elected. Wiener served on the Board since his initial election in 1973; Buchenau was appointed to replace the deceased Ben Polak in January of 1986, and was elected to the position in November of the same year.

Interim incumbent Bastien was the only incumbent to retain her seat on the Board. Clark, Alexander and Bastien bring the diversity of their respective backgrounds as well as their new ideas, to the Board.

Clark attended Grossmont College and bills herself as a civic leader. She acts as president of the Foothills Taxpayers Association, and vice president of the San Diego Area Pro-Family Coalition. She is the youngest member ever elected to the governing board. Clark campaigned on a platform of keeping college affordable, addressing parking problems that plague the community college district, and a devotion to "open mindedness, finding solutions and fairness."

Alexander, 44, is a self-employed businessman from El Cajon who is a executive for the San Diego Board of Realtors, and sits on the Boards of the California Association of Realtors and the San Diego Association of Realtors. Alexander stressed the need to obtain the Board's fair share of state funding. He finished second in the vote getting, behind Clark and ahead of Bastien.

Dr. Bastien was appointed to the Board this spring, after the death fo Elvin Binger. She is 37, holds a degree in clinical psychology form UCLA, with a masters degree in psychology and counseling.

Her experience within the community college system, as a student and a counselor allows what Bastien referred to as an "intimate knowledge" of the community college service.
